this ten millions of Public Funds at 99 per cent; that is, fully 6 per cent. more than the minimum price fixed by the law of their creation. It turned out, however, that the Government had no direct power to dispose of said funds, the law providing that they should be transferred to the Bank.

Gov. Wise on a Visit to Mr. Buchanan—Senator from California—The Cabinet—Oil for the Light-House Service—Death of Gen. John H. Eaton.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Nov. 17.

Gov. HENRY A. WISE passed through the city yesterday, going North. It is understood that he has gone to Wheatland, whither he was invited by Mr. BUCHANAN for consultation in regard to public affairs and the formation of the new Administration. This looks a little as though Mr. BUCHANAN is in danger of repeating Mr. PIERCE's blunder of taking the Southern fire-eaters and disunionists into his councils.

Letters received from California by last mail, seem to make it quite certain that Hon. WM. M. GWIN will be reflected to the Senate from that State this Winter. If he is not, you may mark him down for Mr. BUCHANAN's Secretary of the Navy. He was for several years Chairman of the Senate's Committee on Naval Affairs, where he acquired a valuable experience in connection with that arm of the service. His well known industry, energy, and decision of character, eminently fit him for the position of a Cabinet Minister, where he cannot fail to contribute much strength to the Administration.

Some of the friends of Hon. HOWELL COBB say that he will not covet a seat in the Cabinet, preferring to be Speaker of the House of Representatives. My own opinion, however, in view of what I can gather, is that he will take a Cabinet position—probably the War Department—and that Hon. CHAS. J. FAULKNER, of Virginia, or GEORGE W. JONES, of Tennessee, will be the Speaker of the House.

The Light-House Board has just received bids for the furnishing of 95,000 gallons of oil for the supply of the Light-House service during the coming year. Among the bids received was one from the Breckinridge Coal Company of Kentucky, proposing to supply oil made from their coal. This was something quite unexpected; and as the bid for this novel article was a low one, the Board found themselves in something of a quandary. The Government, however, has had laid before it such apparently-indisputable evidences of the superior illuminating quality of this oil, of its inaptness to gum, and its power to resist a lower temperature than the Winter strained sperm oil, that it has ordered a scientific test to be made. If the result proves satisfactory, the Breckinridge Co. will get the contract next year, at a price far below the lowest bid for the necessary quality of fish-oil.

Gen. JOHN H. EATON, formerly of North Carolina, died here this morning. He has been a Senator in Congress; was Secretary of War under JACKSON, and was at one time Minister to Spain. He executed these and other public trusts with distinguished ability and fidelity. As a private citizen he was honorable, generous, dignified, and generally esteemed. He was aged about seventy. S.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Nov. 17.

It is satisfactorily ascertained that, whatever the Administration is contemplating relative to Panama and Aspinwall, no one can speak upon the subject as to any precise line of action which it proposes to take, except that the rights of our citizens, individually, and the interests of our Government, will be vigorously enforced and protected, by means promising to be more direct and efficient than those heretofore employed. The subject has proved embarrassing to the Administration, and has occupied a large share of Executive deliberation.

The Commissioner of Light-houses has awarded to a citizen of New-Bedford the contract for 95,000 gallons of the best oil, at an average of $1 50 per gallon.

Commander DAVIS, Superintendent of the Nautical Almanac, having been ordered to the Pacific, the preparation of that work has been transferred to the Bureau of Ordnance and Hydrography.

Destructive Fires.

THE LATE TERRIBLE FIRE AT THREE RIVERS—IMMENSE DESTRUCTION OF PROPERTY.

MONTREAL, Monday, Nov. 17.

The fire at Three Rivers broke out at 4 o'clock on Saturday morning. A house in Notre Dame-street was discovered to be on fire at that hour, and those who were in it had barely time to escape with their lives. The wind blowing from the North, the fire caught the houses on the opposite side and spread with fearful rapidity, and consumed three sides of the block—in all about fifty buildings. The estimated value of the property destroyed is $100,000. About one half of the business portion of the town has been laid in ashes. As usual, the scarcity of water tended to this result. For upwards of half an hour not a carter could be found to draw water from the river, which is in the immediate vicinity. The flames spread with fearful rapidity till they were literally exhausted from want of sustenance, and burned everything until they reached the river.

We have a despatch from our correspondent at Lancaster, dated this evening, who states that there has been a heavy run upon the Bank to-day, but that it discharged all its obligations promptly, and is understood to be able to meet all possible demands of its creditors. Mr. BEACHMAN, the former President, having resigned, A. HERR SMITH, Esq., was unanimously elected his successor.

News from Mexico.

REORGANIZATION OF THE NATIONAL GUARD—DRAINAGE OF THE VALLEY OF MEXICO—SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR THE SUFFERERS BY INUNDATIONS IN FRANCE—INDIAN OUTRAGES.

We have dates from the City of Mexico to Oct. 29.

The companies of the National Guard that have been for some time disbanded are now reorganizing with great enthusiasm, to defend the Government against its enemies. This shows the right spirit, and is conclusive evidence that the sympathies of the people are with the present liberal Government.

By the decree of the 4th of March last, a prize of $12,000 was offered to any person who would submit the best plan for the drainage of the valley of Mexico. This offer was alike open to foreign as well as native engineers. The time for all the plans to be before the Committee expires on the 31st inst., and notice has been given that all plans not already submitted must be handed in before that time to MARIANO RIVAPALACIO, No. 7 Colle de Tabuco.

The subscriptions opened in Mexico for the victims of the inundations in France amount, according to the Trait d'Union, to $7,437 or 37,140 francs.

Señor SANTIAGO MIXEIRA, the distinguished engineer, who had charge of the Vera Cruz and San Juan Railroad, had left for Europe in order to study the construction of the Trieste and Vienna railway.

The rainy season has held on unusually this fall, according to the statements of old inhabitants. For the past two weeks the weather has been cold and disagreeable. Rain has fallen in light cold showers.

In Culdad Guzman, (Mehican,) a newspaper has appeared under the name of Defensor del Pueblo.

The national flag was hoisted on Friday last, in honor of Gen. CARRERA, President of Gautemala, it being his birthday.

The subscriptions to aid the La Paz victims amount already to $4,764 50. Señor COMMONFORT subscribed $500.

Señor COMMONFORT has been named Colonel of the new battalion of National Guards, called the "Defenders of Order and Peace."

The Mexican Extraordinary says:

Our readers will see in our San Francisco letter a notice of the flight of the schooner Carlos from that harbor without her regular clearing papers. It will be as well for the Mexican authorities to be on the lookout for this vessel, and if she should happen to drop her anchor in any of the ports of this Republic to treat the vessel and crew properly. The vessel has some mischief to do. It may be against Mexico, but we trust she will have a sufficiency of provisions and water to take her further south.

Señor TELESFORO GONZALEZ ESCAANTS has been named Consul General of Spain, and the Supreme Government has acknowledged him, granting the usual exequatur.

PLUTARCO GONZALEZ, a most popular leader in the last revolution, and Governor of the State of Mexico, has returned to Toluca from a trip to the Tierra Caliente.

Don AURELIO GALLARDO has written a legend, entitled Nero, which, according to some of our colleagues, is decidedly a work of merit.

The Mexican daily papers have been full, for some days past, with the mania for exclusive privileges.

The town of Malpimi (Durango) has lately been the theatre of a dreadful scene. About 150 savages attacked the place, killed the men, and carried away five children and two women as prisoners, besides a quantity of mules and four horses.

Baron DE MULLENE, with his company, left on their explorations in the Valley of Mexico on Thursday morning. The Baron has associated with him several persons of ability and distinction—M. LAVERRIERE, of the Agricultural School in this city, a gentleman of considerable literary notoriety in France, and Dr. AUGUST SONNTAGG, who was with Dr. KANE in the Arctic Exploring Expedition. We trust to be able to give some interesting notices of their explorations.

THE MOORE CONSPIRACY.

Another Chapter to a Very Strange Story—Arrest of Another Alleged Conspirator.

The end of the Moore conspiracy case is not yet. Another and a most romantic chapter has been added to this very singular story of a plot to murder most foul. Besides Dr. MOORE, the original accused, another party, a man named JOSEPH A. HYATT, has been accused of also conspiring with the Doctor to take the life of Mr. A. B. LIVINGSTON, of Newark, N. J., and both were yesterday brought before Justice CONNOLLY, and after a hearing, committed to the Tombs to answer in default of $5,000 each.

It will be remembered that Dr. MOORE was arrested some months since on the same charge. His arrest was based on the sworn statement of two colored men, who alleged that they had been severally importuned by him to proceed to Newark and murder Mr. LIVINGSTON. A large sum of money was offered them for the performance of the deed, but they each declined, and went instead and informed Mr. LIVINGSTON of the scheme. The matter created great interest, but the story seemed so very improbable, and the statements of the parties not being substantiated by other evidence, no further action was allowed, and the matter fell to drop. About a week since, however, the affair was again revived. The brother of Dr. MOORE came forward, and made a statement under oath, corroborative of those previously made by the colored men. The Doctor was thereupon arrested, and it was determined that the whole affair should be thoroughly sifted, and the guilty party made, if possible, to justify himself.

With this view, other parties cognizant of the alleged transaction were looked for, and one, a young man, was found, who makes oath to a very remarkable and romantic story, concerning this already very mysterious affair. The name of this young man is HENRY WORDEN. She resides in Divisionstreet, Brooklyn, E. D. Being duly sworn, she says that she was acquainted with Dr. M. PRICE MOORE, formerly of New-York, about the last of July or the first of August, 1855; that during the months of August and September, she was in his employ; that in the month of August (1855) she was at the Doctor's office, which was at that time in Warren-street. Observing that he seemed depressed in spirits, she asked him what was the matter. He answered that he was annoyed by the conduct of a person who had been for years his intimate friend and acquaintance. He stated the name of the person alluded to to be LIVINGSTON, and that while in difficulty he consigned his wife to his guardianship, he now LIVINGSTON refused to return her property he consigned; but if he were out of the way, it would be all right—he would get her property all back again.

He asked witness if she would undertake to put him out of the way, by taking his life. She refused to have anything to do with the matter, and left the office, and did not see the doctor again for two weeks, at the end of which time he sent one JOSEPH A. HYATT to her with a message that he wished to see her at his office. She went as requested, when the doctor revealed the proposition which he made to her at her previous visit. He urged witness to proceed to go to Trenton, there meet LIVINGSTON at his home, and complete the job. He described LIVINGSTON's personal appearance, stated that he lived in a place called Locust Row, near the depôt and Canal-street—that he was a white stuccoed house, and that the locust trees in the row were in front of it.

"He told me," adds the witness, "to go to Trenton and seek an acquaintance with Rev. Mr. [illegible], representing myself to be an orphan—my parents having died by the yellow fever then prevailing in Norfolk; that I should say I was very poor, and thought, that, as I belonged to a church in Norfolk of the same denomination, he might put me in the way of obtaining employment. Dr. MOORE thought the first person to whom Mr. STARR would recommend me, would be to LIVINGSTON, as he was a prominent member of his church. The Doctor said that she should get into the house of Mr. LIVINGSTON, I should take his life by any possible means I could, and gave me this bottle, (the bottle was exhibited,) containing a liquid, which he said if given to Mr. LIVINGSTON in his coffee or drink, would put him to sleep. He gave me this dagger, (dagger shown,) which he said I could use when Mr. LIVINGSTON was sleeping. He told me to strike at his heart, and showed me the place where the heart lies. The point of the dagger has since been broken by me. He told me that if I succeeded no one would suspect me, and after the excitement was over I could go to Philadelphia, remain there until the next train and then come on to New-York. He then went on to say that if I should not succeed in getting into Mr. LIVINGSTON's house, I should try and get a boarding-place with some poor body where I could go in and out without being noticed; that Mr. LIVINGSTON was in the habit of going to the post-office about 10 o'clock every morning; and of being out late at night; that I could station myself at night behind one of the large trees and could use a hammer and strike him on the temple. That was the place to strike, because the skull was thinnest there—as thin as paper, he said. He gave me the hammer, which I have now here, in a carpet bag, which he also lent me to put my clothes in to go down to Trenton. The hammer was then new. He told me if I did this I would never regret it; that it would benefit me, and that myself and mother should be taken care of, and have a pleasant home in the country. I then consented to go, for fear, if I did not, he might procure some one else who would accomplish what he wanted. I went to Dr. MOORE's office on Saturday, the 13th of October, on which day the Doctor desired me to go to Trenton, so that I might be at Dr. STARR's Church on Sunday, I missed the train and left the carpet-bag, containing my clothes and the hammer, bottle and dagger, and went to Williamsburg where I resided with my mother, and returned on the next day, (Sunday,) to Dr. MOORE's office, procured the carpet-bag and went to Trenton in the six o'clock train on Sunday, the 14th of October, and arrived there between eight and nine o'clock at night; I stopped that night at CUNNINGHAM's Tremont House, at the depôt; after I had taken my supper I addressed a note to Mr. LIVINGSTON, requesting an interview, and informing him that his life was in danger; I did not see Mr. LIVINGSTON until the Thursday following, when I communicated to him all the facts that I have stated; Mr. LIVINGSTON was not at all alarmed. He thanked me for putting him on his guard, but thought he had nothing to apprehend. I then returned to the hotel, and the Saturday following returned to New-York by the 6 o'clock train.

I have never seen Dr. MOORE since, and I never knew or saw Mr. LIVINGSTON before Oct. 14, 1855. JOSEPH A. HYATT was aware of all these facts, and if it were not on account of his family he would have gone himself. Dr. MOORE and HYATT furnished me with the money to go to Trenton. HYATT said if I would meet him at the Peck-slip Ferry on Saturday morning (the day first appointed for my going to Trenton) he would give me a parlor pistol, which could be fired without making scarcely any report. He met me at the time and place appointed, gave me some money, but said he had not been able to procure the pistol."

Here Miss WORDEN's story ends. It was taken down in legal form, and on being shown to Mr. LIVINGSTON he made the following affidavit, fully corroborating the statement of Miss W. so far as relates to her visit to Trenton.

Alfred S. Livingston, being duly sworn, deposes and says, that he resides at Trenton, New-Jersey, Cottage-row; that he has heard the affidavit of Mary Worden, and that the statements therein contained, so far as they relate to her visit to Trenton, and her statement to deponent of the circumstances under which she came to said city, and her employment by M. Price Moore to murder deponent, are true, and correspond with the statement contained in her said deposition. Deponent, from said facts, charges that M. Price Moore and Joseph A. Hyatt, willfully and wickedly combined, conspired and confederated together, and did attempt to murder deponent.

Wherefore he prays that they may be arrested and dealt with according to law. A. S. LIVINGSTON.

Sworn before me, Nov. 14, 1856.
MICHAEL CONNOLLY, Police Justice.

After some legal formalities the magistrate, Justice CONNOLLY, ordered (as already stated) Dr. MOORE and Mr. HYATT to find bail in the sum of $5,000 each. Neither succeeded in doing so at the closing of the Court, so both were committed to the Tombs.

For Blessed Charity.

A great many good things might be said of the "Home of the Friendless," located on East Thirtieth-street, between the Fourth and Madison avenues, which advertises this morning its Thanksgiving Donation visit. It is an old-established and beautiful charity. It is managed exclusively by well-known Christian women, with so happy a method that not a shilling is trifled away on worthless objects. It affords a place and means of protection to homeless and friendless girls and widows. It plucks, as brands from the burning, children deprived of parental care, and places them beyond strong temptation. It holds continual guardianship over the bereaved children committed to its care. It has auxiliary branches in the East and far West, to receive and superintend the destitute. It has sheltered, fed, and variously benefited over 7,000 souls in the "Home," which has become too contracted to meet the demands for admission, and it has found foster-parents and guardians for upwards of 2,000 bereaved children. If any person has a dollar, or a hundred of them, an old coat, child's out-grown dress, a blanket, a shawl, a cloak, or almost anything that can be spared for blessed charity, the Home will take it cheerfully and use it widely, on or before Thanksgiving Day.

Small Pox on Shipboard—The Filthy Condition of the De Witt Clinton.

In our report of the prevalence of small-pox and cholera on board vessels recently arrived in port, the ship De Witt Clinton was named as having had fifteen cases of small-pox on board, and it was also reported that she was in bad condition. The report offended her owners, and they have procured the following card in reply.

CARD.

SHIP DE WITT CLINTON, Monday, Nov. 17, 1856.

In consequence of a malicious and false statement which appeared in the TIMES of to-day, we the undersigned, passengers of the ship De Witt Clinton, take this method of contradicting the same, and adding our testimony in favor of the Captain and officers, in regard to care and kindness of the sick, and cleanliness of the ship during the passage.

Here follows a long list of names.

Whether the report was true or false, will be seen by what is published below. The assertion that it was malicious, is simply ridiculous. The reporter knew none of the parties interested, and could not, therefore, bear malice against them. He received his information at Quarantine, from the Health Officer of the Port, who had just boarded the vessel, and he endeavored to report fairly what was said to him. How far he erred will be seen by the following extract from a letter written by the Health Officer:

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

DEAR SIR: Your remarks about the small size of the Hospital on board, and the unclean condition of the same, were true. The vessel was not in a more filthy condition than emigrant vessels frequently are on arriving. The captain has requested me to ask for a contradiction of the statement that his was filthy. He is entitled to this correction.

If what I said misled you to think that the vessel was filthy, I am sorry for it. I do not remember saying ought of the vessel's condition, but merely spoke of the Hospital. What you said of that is truth.

Truly yours, E. H. THOMPSON.

Who is to Preside?

The Democracy, being out of sight ahead of all other parties in both Boards, do not worry themselves about the claims of anybody to the Presidency—who is not a Democrat dyed in the wool.

In the Board of Aldermen but two candidates have yet been named. They are, Alderman JAMES E. STEERS, of the Eleventh Ward, and Alderman JOHN CLANCY, of the Sixth. The friends of Mr. STEERS place his title to preference upon the ground of his age and his long tried Democratic integrity. They claim, what probably few will deny, that Mr. STEERS is honest, and that he has had more experience in matters of City interest than his more youthful rival.

Alderman CLANCY's friends agree with the sporting men, in the belief that "Age ain't nothin'—blood will tell." They claim that although he is not as old as he will be in a year or two, if he lives long enough, that during the time he has been in the Common Council he has exhibited sufficient ability and zeal in the advancement of the Democratic Party to entitle him to the Presidency of the new Board. Mr. STEERS is a builder of ships, and Mr. CLANCY is a dealer in coal.

In the Board of Councilmen, Mr. JAMES N. PHILLIPS, of the Seventeenth District, Eighth Ward, and Mr. CHARLES H. HASWELL, from the Fifty-fifth District, Twenty-first Ward, are named for the Presidency. They are both Democrats, and either would, in all probability, make a good presiding officer. Mr. HASWELL is a new member, and as Mr. PHILLIPS has had considerable experience, his friends claim that he is the best fitted for the office, and that, therefore, he should be elected. The claims of each of the candidates in both Boards will soon be decided upon by caucuses of their own party.

Lecture by Thomas Francis Meagher.

As usual the announcement that THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER would deliver a lecture at the Tabernacle last evening, drew together an audience as large as could be packed within the walls of that building. The lecture, which concerned the distinctions between Republicanism and Monarchy, was delivered for the benefit of the family of the late Capt. KENNEGAN, and the proceeds can hardly fail of exceeding the expectations of all concerned. Several Military Companies were present, and added to the interest of the occasion. The lecture was one of the very best that has been delivered by Mr. MEAGHER, and it is only in consequence of a request from that gentleman, that the lecture should not be reported at present, that we refrain from giving at least a digest of it.

☞ M. ALEX. AUMONT, the Napoleon of the French turf, has brought an action against a French railway company, whose line crosses his celebrated private race-field and stables at Chantilly, laying his damages at $100,000. He alleges the passage of railway trains destroys the nerves of race-horses. His stock of blooded horses is advertised to be sold at auction; this, however, is the third or fourth time they have been sold at auction, and he will, doubtless, buy them all in, as he has hitherto done. The railway company offers him $6,000 damages. Perhaps railroads will account for the increased amount of nerves in the Yahoo, as well as the Houyhnhnm race. It is well to know that, whereas, in old times women hadn't any nerves, now the whole bulk of an educated lady is more than half nerves. Investigate.

☞ The Committees of the Councilmen, ordinarily assembling in the City Hall, took an airing yesterday. The pursuit of knowledge under difficulties induced the Committee on Railroads to hire a carriage and go to inspect the progress of the Eighth-avenue Railroad extension to Fifty-ninth-street, and also to examine a nuisance somewhere in the neighborhood of Fifty-first-street. The Committee on Markets, actuated by the same laudable desire to take nothing upon trust, also got into a carriage, and in lively mood went to determine the most likely site for a new market. The Committee on Streets also took a ride, for the purpose of determining what streets required repaving.

☞ TIMOTHY WATERS, Jr., assures the world that although he was employed by the Superintendent of Repairs and Supplies to do most of the painting ordered under that department, people need not think he wasn't a regular painter. He says that he served a regular apprenticeship and worked as a journeyman at the business for a long time. The public will be glad to know of the exception, for, to be employed by a head of department has for a year or two back been taken as sufficient evidence that the employe knew nothing of his business.

☞ The total number of deaths in the City, last week, was 395,—an increase of 37 on the mortality of the previous week. ☞ The Introductory Lecture at the Hydropathic Institution was given last evening at the Hall No. 15 Laight-street, by O. W. MAY, M. D., of Fishkill, who for about an hour dilated on various points connected with the healing art, as viewed by "Hydropathic" eyes. Prof. FOWLER, and Mrs. Dr. FOWLER, Drs. Brooklyn Common Council—The Union Ferry Company.

At a meeting of the Brooklyn Common Council held last evening, the following communication was received and read:

The undersigned landholders and residents of the Western District of Brooklyn, would respectfully represent to your honorable body that by the action of the Union Ferry Company the rates of fare for themselves individually have been raised some "three hundred per cent," and the business of their families in a still greater ratio. Your petitioners would respectfully represent that the residents of the Eastern section of our city, with comparatively few population, have the privilege of crossing the ferries for the sum of $10 per annum.

We therefore, respectfully ask your honorable body to take some action in the premises, by appointing a committee to cooperate with a like committee of the New-York Common Council, or in such other manner as your honorable body may deem most reliable to protect your petitioners from such unwarrantable exactions on the part of said Company. Your petitioners, feeling and knowing that if some relief is afforded them in the premises, it will be the means of saving many of your petitioners, and thousands of other residents from our city; and, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

The petition had several hundred names attached thereto.

Alderman LOWRIE moved that the petition be laid upon the table, as the Common Council had no control of the matter, and there was no remedy.

The President of the Board, Alderman BOERUM, said that a remedy could be obtained by applying to the "Commissioners of Ferries" for a reduction of two or three farthings could be obtained. He hoped the Board would act in the matter.

On motion of Alderman FOSTER, the matter was placed in the hands of a special Committee, consisting of Aldermen Backhouse, Van Brunt, Kellogg and Lowrie.

CITY RAILROAD COMPANIES.

Several petitions were presented complaining of the City Railroad Company for not completing their tracks in accordance with the agreement entered into with the city.

In connection with this a communication from the Counselor was read, in which he says, in reply to information asked, that the Board has the power to compel the Railroad Company to complete their roads as far as practicable.

A special Committee, consisting of Aldermen VAN BRUNT, KALBFLEISCH and LOWRIE, was appointed to ascertain whether the Company had laid their tracks as far as practicable.

HOUSES AND LOTS FOR SALE.

BRUNSWICK CITY, GEORGIA.—SECOND SEMI-ANNUAL SALE OF BUILDING LOTS.—The proprietors of the city of Brunswick hereby give notice, that a peremptory sale of 900 eligible building lots will take place, by public auction, at the Oglethorpe Hotel, in said city, on THURSDAY, Nov. 27, at 9 o'clock A. The port and city of Brunswick hold out commercial and maritime advantages superior to those possessed by any other south of the Chesapeake Bay. The climate is healthy at all seasons. The Brunswick and Florida Railroad is now transporting freight and passengers from Brunswick to the Satilla River. The work is in steady progress westward—the whole line being under contract to Thomasville, and thence to the Florida line.

POLITICAL.

[illegible] Tuesday, Nov. 18, 1856.

[illegible] Democratic Party have been more than usually [illegible] for about three days, and [illegible] the occasion of the [illegible] and J. C. Breckenridge. [illegible] the demonstration was Friday [illegible] Vice-Presidency of the United [illegible] Democrats, who [illegible] pay their respects to these distinguished [illegible] of equitable sovereignty. Upon arriving at the hotel, the procession halted, when the little [illegible] by his more active partisans [illegible] afterwards reappeared [illegible] and spoke with [illegible] eloquence on his favorite theme, the Kansas and Nebraska bill. General SHIELDS followed in a short speech, and was loudly cheered.

Thus you perceive that the "Little Giant" is fairly [illegible] for the political race of 1860. What struck [illegible] as somewhat unusual and significant, was the [illegible] all the leading Douglas men of the State [illegible] without previous notice congregated at this point just at this particular juncture. [illegible] were Hon. E. H. PAINE, SAMUEL [illegible] JAMES A. PEARSON, of Cook County, who [illegible] opposed the nomination of JAMES BUCHANAN; Hon. F. P. MILLER, District-Attorney Monroe, Hon. [illegible] GRAY, Gen. H. M. DOWNS, ARTHUR [illegible], and other greater and lesser lights of that [illegible] of the Democracy. As this nice little tea party [illegible] to the hall to partake of a beautiful repast, [illegible] especially for the occasion by mine host of the Jackson, it was whispered around in private [illegible], "What is up now?" The quidnuncs put their [illegible] together to solve this mystery of the unexpected [illegible] of the faithful. It was shrewdly suspected [illegible] of the knowing ones that a Douglas Cabinet [illegible] were to be selected by these apostles of modern Democracy. By others it was thought that it was [illegible] measures to get the ear of old Buck, and [illegible] by hook or by crook, the control of the patronage of the General Government to advance the [illegible] of the Little Giant. To say the least, it was the [illegible] of the Douglas men, hosted on these proceedings [illegible] amusement, if not with astonishment. The cool [illegible] of these men who had moved heaven and earth to defeat the nomination of JAMES BUCHANAN [illegible] now that of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS, now [illegible] to control the President elect, and secure the public patronage, was decidedly refreshing. The Buchanan men, however, consoled themselves with the reflection that they had elected a man to the first office in the gift of the people, who was fully competent [illegible] to make a little capital for the "Little Giant" [illegible] Democracy, and without previous notice congregated at this point just at this particular juncture. [illegible] were Hon. E. H. PAINE, SAMUEL [illegible] JAMES A. PEARSON, of Cook County, who [illegible] opposed the nomination of JAMES BUCHANAN; Hon. F. P. MILLER, District-Attorney Monroe, Hon. The American Party.

The Trenton State Gazette says that a portion of the Americans in that city have nominated Commodore STOCKTON for President, and JOHN M. BOTTS for Vice-President, in 1860. These gentlemen evidently intend to take the field in season. They are apparently fearful that if they do not nominate now, their party will disappear entirely, so they take time by the forelock, and make what little hay they can while the sun shines.

The American Party has had a short life, and not a very merry one. Two years was the period of its organized existence. It burst like a meteor upon the sudden blaze in New-York at the election of 1854, and astonished everybody with the strength of its vote. It increased in strength with great rapidity,—swept the Eastern States,—carried in succession the three great States of Ohio, Pennsylvania and New-York,—developed marked strength in several of the Southern States, and seemed strong enough, a year ago, to grasp the Presidency. It made the attempt, and Maryland was the only State in which it had a plurality of the votes. In every other State,—even in those where it was strongest a year ago,—a regular, organized party it has almost ceased to exist.

The causes of this sudden extinction can not lie in the character of the party, or in the sentiment of the public mind out of which it sprung. It must be sought in other quarters. No sentiment, or conviction, which has power to create such a party in so short a time, can possibly lose its vital force so suddenly. We have very little doubt that the American sentiment is as strong now as it ever has been. The people of the country at large entertain the same convictions now upon the subject of the foreign vote, as they did a year ago. They believe it to be, as a whole and especially the Irish portion of it, the least intelligent, the least elevated in its motives and the most under the control of demagogues, of any portion of our people. They very generally believe that the public good demands some more stringent enforcement of existing laws, and possibly new enactments, in regard to the naturalization of foreigners. And they are universally indignant at the controlling part often played in our most important elections, by the banding together of the Irish vote, and its being marshaled in solid phalanx under party leaders, on one side or the other at the polls. The public jealousy and distrust in regard to this matter are, in our judgment, as strong to-day as they have been at any time.

We do not attribute the decline of the American Party, therefore, to any decay of the sentiment which gave birth to it. We believe it has been destroyed by its leaders, who diverted it from its original purpose, and used it as a means of revenging their own personal grievances, and of promoting their own personal ends. It was allowed to fall into faithless hands. In this State, in the Winter of 1855, the attempt was made to use it for the defeat of Senator SEWARD's reelection. The failure of that endeavor put the Party still more completely under the control of men with whom his defeat was the beginning and the end of political ambition. Under their guidance it became in this State little more than a new edition of the old Silver Grey Party,—slightly enlarged, but not in the least improved. It was this assumption of its leadership by the prominent members of that faction, which gradually brought the American Party into direct hostility to the movement of organized resistance to the aggressions of Slavery, which was rendered necessary by the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, and the measures for the conquest of Kansas by which it was followed. These same men at Philadelphia [illegible] the hands of the Pro-Slavery members of the American Convention, from the Southern States, aided in securing the nomination of Mr. BUCHANAN, and thus arrayed the entire party in direct opposition to the Republican movement.

This was an utterly needless, and, as the event has proved, it was a fatal mistake. The Republican issue was the one which first developed attention. The whole country felt its paramount importance and magnitude. Thousands of the American Party felt this to be so, and refused to act with an organization which had permitted itself thus to be arrayed on the side of Slavery. It was soon felt that Mr. BUCHANAN's prospects at the North were hopeless,—and this only led to still more humiliating and degrading appeals for Southern votes. Now with the South, as with the North, Slavery was the controlling issue;—and the contest, so far as lay between the two, the American Party was left out in the cold. Its leaders, however, [illegible] their personal and political ambitions.

What [illegible] remains to be seen. It is [illegible] that those who have manifested the spirit hitherto—and allows itself to be identified with everything that is bigoted in religion, base in morals, narrow and contemptible in temper and spirit, and Pro-Slavery in political tendencies, it will sink still deeper in character and in votes. If it repudiates those who have led it to ruin, liberalizes its creed to the broad but just standard of American nationality, and takes the side of Freedom in the war which Slavery is waging for ascendency in the Federal Government, it may yet contribute something to the rescue of the country from the perils, foreign and domestic, by which its peace is threatened.

Lecturing Lions.

For good or for ill, the Lecture has become an institution in the Northern States. It has been established more securely than the Opera; it is supported almost as liberally as the Church, and by a large class of the community it seems to be regarded as a felicitous combination of secular attractions with spiritual advantages. We have no design, now, of entering upon the question of the intrinsic value of the system. As a system in actual operation, and pregnant with results of influence, we accept it, and our only present concern is to see that mischievous men are kept away from meddling with an engine which may be made so efficient. For this reason it is, that we make our appeal to all our readers interested in the direction of Lyceums and Societies throughout the North, against the employment of famous lecturers for the sake of their fame, without consideration of the probable worth or worthlessness of their lectures. ABD-EL-KADER is a very illustrious personage, whom BARNUM might, with advantage, bring before the American public, and whom all the quid-nunes would rejoicingly spend their shillings to see. But we should hold a Lyceum Committee to be singularly reckless of their duty, if they should invite ABD-EL-KADER to give them a lecture on the Life of JOHN KNOX, or the history of Trial by Jury. The aptness of ABD-EL-KADER to enlighten us on such themes is ridiculously flagrant, and everybody feels it to be so, for ABD-EL-KADER never had a chance to understand either JOHN KNOX or Trial by Jury. But we never ought to forget that, if some men are ignorant because they never had an opportunity to learn, others may be ignorant because they have willfully mis-learned what they pretend to teach.

Here, for instance, we find it announced in the Northern papers that Col. BENTON, of Missouri, proposes to illuminate the Northern mind on the subject of the Union; that several Northern Lyceums have gratefully accepted his proposition, and that the venerable Colonel even is now about to rise in full effulgence upon the benighted inhabitants of an antiquated town somewhere "away down East."

Now, Col. BENTON is a famous man. Few men in our history have won a riper or, on the whole, a better-merited renown, and we desire to speak of his past services to the country with full and sincere respect. But when Col. BENTON undertakes to give us his present views on the subject of the "Union," we have a right to inquire what his present views on that subject are. His ancient fame is no [illegible] guarantee of his actual intelligence. We examine, therefore, his recent speeches, and we find him laying down doctrines so inconsistent with each other, and taking up positions so mutually antagonistic as to make it impossible for us to withhold the expression of our conviction that few men in the country, even of those who have most justly earned a title to the respectful oblivion of their countrymen, are so little fitted to talk to American citizens on the subject of the Union at this crisis in our affairs as is Col. BENTON. We take his address at St. Louis, the latest published of his discourses, and find him maintaining almost in the same breath, that the Union is in imminent danger, and that it is perfectly safe—that the Slavery extensionists must at all risks be controlled, and that the party which seeks to extend Slavery must be strenuously supported—that it is the height of patriotism to insist on the restoration of Constitutional principles in the Government, and that the party which demands the restoration of those principles is eminently unpatriotic, sectional and unwise.

Incoherencies such as these may not interfere with the career of a politician, but they are incompatible with the character of a statesman. They may help a man to a seat in the Senate, but they should certainly exclude him from the desk of the lecture-room. And no Lyceum Committee which shall consent to employ Col. BENTON as a lecturer upon the principles and condition of the Union, in the face of his own most recent addresses, can be acquitted of the charge of reckless trifling with the trust reposed in them, and of managing an institution intended to disseminate serious instruction in an agreeable form, in such a spirit as would become the conductor of a menagerie or a wax-work show. If we must have lions to lecture to us, let them be lions because they are lecturers, and not lecturers because they are lions. Above all, let us have no lecturers whose only claim is that they have been lions!

PRO-SLAVERY MOVEMENTS IN KANSAS—PROGRESS OF THE CRUSADE.—The Pro-Slavery Party in Kansas has been stimulated to renewed activity by the result of the election. A "large and enthusiastic meeting of Southern men," as it is styled in the official report, was held at Westport, Missouri, not long since, at which the most vigorous measures were urged for the promotion of emigration from the South and the establishment of Slavery in Kansas. Here are three of the resolutions adopted on this occasion:

Resolved, That we mutually pledge "our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor," to aid and support, at all hazards and to the last extremity, each other in all efforts to colonize Kansas with a Pro-Slavery population.

Resolved, That those persons from the South who have settled in Kansas, or intend doing so, immediately organize themselves into companies or colonies, consisting of not less than 20 nor more than 50 men, and that these different companies settle at convenient distances from each other, so as to afford mutual protection.

Resolved, That this meeting appoint representatives, whose duty it shall be to canvass the Southern States and collect means, so as to secure our colonies in Kansas against wrong during the coming Winter, and for the benefit of future emigrants to Kansas.

These declarations are very explicit. They leave no doubt as to the object of those who make them, nor as to the measures with which that object is pursued. In accordance with the last of these resolutions, committees have been appointed in every slaveholding State, to collect men and money for the avowed and avowed purpose of making Kansas a Slave State. What do the Journal of Commerce, the Albany Atlas and Argus and the Boston Post think of these proceedings? Whenever anybody in the North proposes aid in making Kansas a Free State by the same means, these journals are prompt enough and emphatic enough, in the expression of their displeasure. Of the Pro-Slavery movement, however, they have not a word to say.

The election is now over, and as no party purpose requires silence on these topics, even from the most zealous partisan journals, why should they not speak out? Their silence gives assent to this Pro-Slavery crusade. And if a voice or hand is raised in opposition to it, their savage denunciation leaves no room for doubt as to the side on which, in spite of their professions, their sympathies are really enlisted.

Walker.

The Nicaraguan Mail by the Texas has thrown little light on the actual position of General WALKER, or on the resources he can command to carry on the war against the allied forces of Central America, arrayed against him. The special organ of WALKER, el Nicaragüense, continues to give elaborate details of the recent battles of Massaya and Granada, but as no new facts are elicited, we have refrained from republishing what, in another form, appeared in this journal a fortnight since. Though the Nicaraguan versions of these battles are, as usual, highly colored, and must be received with many grains of allowance, we are not disposed to doubt the fact that General WALKER has achieved two most signal victories. But their influence upon the future destinies of the country will depend almost altogether on the promptness and energy with which they are followed up. To form any opinion it is most important to know what means the General possesses for carrying on the war, and what resistance the enemy is disposed to make. This information, however, we are unable to obtain from a reliable source, for the newspapers and correspondence from Central America are wholly one-sided in their views. We doubt not the efficiency of the Nicaraguan army or the high-spirited condition and bravery of the men. But these qualifications alone will not insure victory. Men, money and ammunition are wanted—and immediately. Two howitzers and a number of rifles, used at the battle of Granada, are arguments upon which we are more inclined to base expectations of WALKER's success. It is somewhat remarkable that, though in every battle the Americans have triumphed, we should see no evidence of any inclination on the part of the conquered to abandon the war. They still retain their foothold on Nicaraguan soil; and we must therefore infer that victories, like those of Granada and Massaya, are as disastrous to WALKER as they are to his enemies. More so in fact—for the latter are the most numerous, and, in a series of conflicts, could inflict losses which the raw recruits from the United States are ill-calculated to remedy or supply. Hence, though the prospects of General WALKER look brighter now than at any former period, his success rests on the contingency of receiving ample aid in men and means from the United States. But will that aid be given?

The policy which the General has thought proper to pursue of late has decidedly tended to alienate the sympathies of our people. His will is absolute, and his Government now has no affinity whatever with republican doctrines. This, perhaps, may be necessary for the salvation of himself, his men, and his influence, but his severe dictatorship is none the less odious, and will find but few supporters here. The impression also prevails that he is the tool of Southern Slaveholders—pledged to carry out their programme of restoring Slavery in Central America, wresting Cuba from Spain, and reopening the slave-trade. We hesitate not to say that an attempt to further any such schemes would be the certain signal of WALKER's ruin, and would consign his name to eternal infamy. But if—animated by pure motives and a lofty ambition—he seeks to liberalize and redeem the country he has adopted, he has a golden opportunity now to win for himself a most enviable reputation and the warm support of the people of the United States.

STRICT CONSTRUCTION—ITS INDIA RUBBER QUALITY.—The Cincinnati platform declared that all grants of power in the Constitution should be "strictly construed," and that it is "inexpedient and dangerous to exercise doubtful Constitutional powers." It was this clause of the platform which embarrassed the Convention on the subject of a Pacific Railroad. They accordingly adopted a resolution in favor of the road, provided it was compatible with a strict construction of the Constitution; and that point was to be decided by the President himself!

Mr. BUCHANAN's letter to California was intended to inform the people of that State,—without informing the people of the other States,—what his opinion on this subject was. He assures them that he finds the enterprise quite compatible with the Constitution, because that instrument enables Congress to provide for the national defence, and, therefore, to provide anything that in the contingency of war may contribute to facilitate military operations: railroads, wagon-roads, canals, everywhere, to transmit troops and munitions; endless river and harbor improvements, to expedite naval evolutions; telegraphs and post-routes, to convey intelligence, &c., &c.

We are a little curious to see how the Virginia Democracy, and the South Carolina strict Constructionists, will regard this profession of Mr. BUCHANAN's faith. Thus far they have preserved a discreet and decorous silence. We think, however, it must have excited in their minds some little distrust as to the soundness of the new President upon this subject. They may find him, by-and-by, equally unreliable on some others.

THE PANAMA ROUTE—MEASURES FOR SECURING ITS SAFETY.—If the report of our Washington Correspondent, published yesterday, is well founded, President PIERCE has done a very discreet thing in the proposition he has made to the Government of New-Granada. The massacre of American citizens which occurred at Panama in April last,—and the fact which was then conclusively established, that the Government of that country is utterly unable to protect such strangers, show clearly the necessity of some precaution for the future. Mr. CONWIN's report, it will be remembered, advised the closure of the Isthmus as the only measure by which the safety of the transit could be adequately secured. No such step

A GROWING STATE.—The Philadelphia Bulletin, which was one of the first papers to point out the great election frauds of October, in Pennsylvania, as indicated by the great increase in the popular vote, now uses the same evidence to establish its theory that Pennsylvania is increasing in population much faster than New-York, and will soon be entitled to the appellation of the Empire State. The increase in the popular vote of this State at the last election, over that of 1852, is but 14 per cent., while the increase in Pennsylvania is 19 per cent. Even if this estimate were true, and the popular vote of the two States a just indication of the relative increase of population, New-York would still be entitled to her preëminence as the Empire State for half a century longer at least. The mineral resources of Pennsylvania are giving her a great advantage over New-York, unquestionably, but the Empire State has within her borders immense manufacturing and agricultural resources which have yet to be developed. If the Keystone State can outstrip us in the race for wealth and material prosperity, she is heartily welcome to all her advantage. But the Pennsylvanians must not get unduly excited because their favorite son has been elected President.

THE JUBILANT DEMOCRACY.—It is somewhat curious to note the fashion in which some people become jubilant. The Democracy in Massachusetts are waxing jolly on the strength of BUCHANAN's election. Half a dozen separate glorifications of the triumph of the Democracy are announced in the Boston papers, "likely to occur about this time," as the old almanacs say. Sundry little towns and modest hamlets are preparing to spread themselves; banners are to be flouted, transparencies are to shine out in the darkness, and there is to be a general good time. All this is very natural. But it is withal the fact that these demonstrations are announced as being purely "National" in their character. It would not answer to seem particularly joyful over the terrible whipping that New-England gave the Democracy. Very much disgusted with the turn affairs have taken in their own State, the Democracy of Massachusetts particularly have taken upon themselves the labor of rejoicing for their neighbors. Just now, they believe devoutly in the Union and "nothing but the Union."

VIRTUES OF READING AND WRITING.—If reading and writing came by nature, as Dogberry says, what a blessing it would be for mankind in general. These simple arts, which are so common in some of our States, have produced the most remarkable political results, as shown in the last election. The greatest number of readers and writers turned out the greatest number of Republican voters. But the effect of reading and writing was nowhere so remarkably exhibited as in Illinois. In that portion of the State called Egypt, which voted squarely for BUCHANAN, these accomplishments are very rare. Sangamon County, for instance, which gave a majority of 2,024 for the Cincinnati platform, according to the census contains 2,024 adults, that can neither read nor write; while in Winnebago County, which gave a majority of 3,200 for FREMONT, there are but nine adults who cannot read and write.

THE PUBLIC EYE.—Alderman FULLMER gravely cautioned his fellow-members in the Board of Aldermen last night, to beware how they acted, as he believed the public eye was upon them. He also warned them that the Press was watching them and would expose their misdeeds. But the gentlemen to whom he uttered his warnings care nothing for the public eye, and as for the Press, the representative of the Sixth Ward expressed his belief that it was "venial." This of course settled the matter, and Alderman FULLMER's warnings were disregarded. The Board of Aldermen cannot be expected to lend their countenance to anything suspected of venality, which was what the gentleman from the "bloody Sixth" probably meant. The Aldermen care nothing for the public eye being on them; the hand of a policeman or a sheriff's officer would have much more terror for them.

THE MOB CITY.—The city of Baltimore begins to need a Vigilance Committee, or something like it. A remedy is wanted to counteract a very bad complaint. The fashion of settling people's affairs by the aid of a small piece of lead and a few grains of powder, assisted by a percussion cap, is becoming unpleasantly predominant in the City of Monuments. Presently there must be added to its monumental records one to the Genius of Murder. Our Baltimore exchanges report that fourteen persons are now under indictment for willful murder, in every case by shooting with gun or pistol. Baltimore must reform, or send forth an unpleasant savor. She is too strong and handsome to be placed permanently in the catalogue of lawless towns.

DEATH OF AN OLD POLITICIAN.—The telegraph announces the death yesterday, in Washington City, of Major JOHN H. EATON, late of Tennessee. Major EATON occupied a very prominent position in the political world a quarter of a century ago. He represented his native State in the U. S. Senate, and was President JACKSON's first Secretary of War. He married the widow of Purser TOMPKINS, of the United States Navy, and, in consequence of the views of the other members of the Cabinet refusing to call upon her, the Cabinet was dissolved. Mr. VAN BUREN, who had been Secretary of State, going as Minister to England, and Major EATON to Spain. It is many years since Major EATON took any prominent part in political affairs.

A. few days of December, such a night as [illegible] west wind, [illegible] of fine flying sand [illegible] ing through the crevices, blinding the eyes, filling the lungs, and spoiling the clothes of everybody who ventured out of doors. The dust of the desert is pure sand, but the dust of our streets is a compound mixture not pleasant to think of. One such dusty day as yesterday costs more, in the injury done to health and clothing, than would pay for keeping the streets clean half the year. But we must endure the dust until a visitation of rain or snow comes to laid it.

[illegible] Board of Aldermen, [illegible] charges against the Commissioner of Repairs and Supplies, and the Superintendent of Public Buildings, should lie over until the 2d of January. The object of this postponement is obvious enough. There will then be a decided Democratic majority in the Board, and Messrs. SELAH and IRVING will have the advantage of being tried by their political friends. They need give themselves no uneasiness as to the future.

SOUTH CAROLINA LUTHERANS.—The Lutherans of South Carolina have adopted Bully BROOKS as their patron saint. They have been so much exasperated at the strictures of the organ of their sect, published in Baltimore, on the conduct of BROOKS in the Sumner affair, that they have resolved to establish an organ of their own. Having adopted Bully BROOKS as their patron saint, they will of course expound the gospel according to his code of ethics.

NEWS FROM EUROPE.—The screw steamship City of Washington, from Liverpool on the 5th inst., for Philadelphia, arrived off Cape Island yesterday evening, with four days' later intelligence; but up to the time of going to press we had received nothing but the mere announcement of her arrival.

AMUSEMENTS.

BURTON'S NEW THEATRE.—Mr. BOUCICAULT, the most indefatigable as he is the most able of modern dramatists, produced a new play here last night called "Genevieve, or the Reign of Terror," thus inaugurating, with just importance, the engagement of himself and wife (unnecessarily called Miss AGNES ROBERTSON in the bills) with a novelty worthy of attention. The bill describes the piece as a historical drama, and the characters in it are the Chevalier de St. George, played by Mr. MORTON; Maurice Lindsay, by Mr. DAVENPORT; Lorin, by Mr. BOUCICAULT; Dismar, by Mr. C. FISHER; Vincent Millotaire, by Mr. HOLMAN; Baron de la Mole, by Mr. D. HOWARD; Tonquin Tinville, by Mr. RAYMOND; Governor of the Temple, by Mr. BISHOP; Simon, by Mr. STEVENS; Crier of the Court, by Mr. GOURLAY; Spermicondos Delabelle, by Mr. BURTON; Genevieve, by Mrs. E. DAVENPORT; Artemise, by Miss AGNES ROBERTSON; Citoyenne Villefort, by Mrs. DUNN. The piece is divided into seven tableaux, and occupies an entire evening in representation. It was originally produced in London, and achieved a decided success. We conclude therefore that it has merit—a safe conclusion to predicate of any of Mr. BOUCICAULT's pieces.

Unfortunately we were unable to hear and judge this drama. Although we were in the house before the curtain rose, we found the parquette and much of the parquette-circle filled. We were compelled, therefore, to take our stand in the lobby, at the back section of the house, and, with many [illegible] companions, left the unwelcome spot, with no impression at all of the play, except weariness.

Mr. BURTON's new theatre, in spite of its elegance, is the worst contrived dramatic temple in New-York. Built originally for an opera house, it lacks all the essential points of a theatre, and is utterly bad for declamatory purposes. In the first circle, and in most of the parquette-circle, (where we were stationed,) it is impossible to distinguish any specific language in the drumming sound which is borne to the ear. An indistinct and drowsy murmuring, mingled with an occasional bellow, is all that can be heard. When the building was first opened, under the gorgeous management of Mr. EDDY, we referred to these defects, and experience only teaches us the justice of our strictures. One third of the audience at Mr. BURTON's cannot hear. They can see to be sure, and that is something in a theatre, but for critical purposes the two faculties are needed. Contenting ourselves with one, we will observe that the tableaux in Mr. BOUCICAULT's piece are interesting, and seem to be produced with more care than we are apt to find displayed on such matters at this establishment. Are we wrong in attributing this foreign element of taste to Mr. BOUCICAULT? For the rest, if the author of this play will favor us with the manuscript, we shall take much pleasure in examining it, and expressing our humble opinion of its merits. Those of our readers who are anxious to see it performed had better do one of three things: secure their seats in the day time, or take their station at the door by six o'clock, or—stay away. With our present impression of the comforts of Mr. BURTON's theatre, we advise the latter course as the safest, although not the most cheerfully acceded to.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—One of those astonishingly crowded houses, which can only be seen at this theatre, assembled last night to witness Mr. WALLACK's impersonation of Don Cæsar de Bazan, in the play of that name. The unmatched excellence of the veteran's interpretation was the wonder and delight of all. If the play had been entirely new, and the hero a marvelous debutant, the enthusiasm could not have been more intense.

To-night Mr. WALLACK appears in his famous character of Martin Heywood, in the "Rent Day"—the best modern English drama on the stage.

LAURA KEENE'S THEATRE.—This new and beautiful theatre will positively open to-night. The play selected for the occasion is SHAKESPEARE's "As you Like it." Miss LAURA KEENE will address the audience, and the usual ceremonies of an opening night will be gone through.

The Town of Osawatomie, Kansas.

CLYDE, N. Y., Sunday, Nov. 16, 1856.

The little town of Osawatomie, laid out by O. C. BROWN, Esq., (formerly of Utica, N. Y.,) and built up through his influence, was one of the strongholds of Republicanism in Kansas, and as such it became a nuisance in the estimation of such creatures (for they are not men) as STRINGFELLOW, ATCHISON, and their political associates. The destruction of this town, for a long time contemplated by the Border Ruffians, was finally consummated by them in August last. Shall it be immediately rebuilt, and again become the abode of a quiet, industrious and happy people?

Those who intend to remove from this State to the Far West would do well to read and inquire into the future prospects of Kansas. We believe that it possesses a soil as productive as any under heaven, and that it will one day become the "Banner State," unless its prosperity is checked by the withering, blighting curse of negro Slavery.

The location of Osawatomie is a grand one for commercial purposes, and we trust that a sufficient number of good and true men (fully armed for self-defence) will immediately settle there and commence the erection of dwellings, stores, churches, school-houses, &c.

Let the free states of Missouri and the whole South learn that they cannot destroy Liberty by burning up Free-State settlements. S. H. O.

DEAFNESS AND BLINDNESS.

Between twenty and thirty patients attended, many of whom, it was stated by their parents, had been totally deaf and dumb.

They were subjected to various tests, by which it was proved that their deafness had been cured by the application of DR. TURNBULL'S NEW REMEDY.

And what appeared marvelous to the [illegible] even depended on paralysis of the auditory nerve, or obstruction of the tympanum, or obstruction of the Eustachian tube, relief has been obtained, in a complete cure without pain, delay, pain or inconvenience.

CURE CASES OF DEAFNESS

WARREN-ST. FIRE.

Room the New-York Daily Times,
Mon. Morn., Tuesday, Nov. 11, 1856.

To the Editor of the Times:

SIR: IN THE FIRE AT NO. 8 WARREN-STREET, on the morning of the 9th inst., our most valuable books and papers were exposed for the hours to the action of water. Marvin's Fire-Proof Safe was in the room, but we have to say that it came through as labeled, but because we have to say that it saved them. Our books and papers came out unharmed, except the binding of the books, which was damaged by the steam.

Our store was five stories above ground, and the rooms occupied from cellar to garret.

The interior of the safe could not be attacked by any means, who witnessed it. No furnace could be built, nor the ingenuity of man to create a more intense heat.

We voluntarily give this testimony to the merits of Marvin's safes, and advise your readers, if interested in fire-proof safes, to examine Marvin's safes, and satisfy themselves of their merits. Respectfully,

HAVILAND, HASKAL & BURNEY.

VOL. I. OF LOOMIS' ILLUMINATED CLASSICS,
"CHANTICLEER,"
A THANKSGIVING STORY OF THE PEABODY FAMILY.
BY CORNELIUS MATHEWS.
The publishers of this new series of illuminated classics, intended to embrace entertaining stories, healthful in moral, universal in interest—delightful romance in elaborate—take great pleasure in being able to present, as their first volume, an American work, which has been characterized by "Graham's" as "a gem of a little book," and the "Vicar of Wakefield," which are representatives of the charming class of fictions to which the series will be devoted.
"CHANTICLEER"—Read it.
A new edition of "Chanticleer," the most admirable of all merited Thanksgiving or home stories.
From the Boston Journal.
Replete with beautiful thoughts and high-toned sentiments.
"CHANTICLEER!"
From the New-York Courier and Enquirer.
Abounds with faithful delineation, and is pervaded with genial humor. Ere the eye can have traveled over the book half through, a hundred lineaments will have risen again in the memory. The publisher has had regard to the former popularity of the work by bringing out this third edition of it in a very neat style, and embellishing it with finely illustrative cuts by Darley.
From the London Leader.
A charming book.
Let us all read a good book together,
Eat your turkey and read
"CHANTICLEER."
From the Southern (Charleston) Literary Gazette.
"Chanticleer, a Thanksgiving Story of the Peabody Family," has won the public heart, both by the felicity of its subject and the grace, wit and goodness displayed in its execution.
From the New-Orleans Picayune.
Wholesome and entertaining reading, as varied and spicy as a mince pie.
The above unique volume is now offered to the public. Price 50 cents. To the trade the usual discount; and when 100 or more copies are ordered at a time, five free copies will be allowed in addition on every 100 so ordered.

[illegible] the knowledge of the [illegible] we receive and which under the [illegible] commercial communications forta- [illegible] eyes of the French Post- [illegible] The state of things revealed there re- [illegible] forcibly of the days of Louis XVI. [illegible] Emperor in the place of the [illegible] King and the aristocracy of [illegible] place of the aristocracy of blood, a [illegible] noble-woman in place of an Austrian [illegible] the more unbending mind of Louis [illegible] in place of the soft, wavering, pliable [illegible] Queen Caroline, and all the other [illegible] of both epochs,—fraud in the higher, [illegible] in the middle and want in the lower [illegible] frivolous in the ruler, insanity in the [illegible] frivolous on the press, levity in litera- [illegible] in the theatres, debauchery in [illegible] in ethics, and depravity in [illegible] all with some slight modifications [illegible] found to be the same.

Again the cry for bread makes the inmates of the Tuileries shudder and tremble. Corn [illegible] merchants, who speculated for a rise in flour, have again to look out for their necks. Houses [illegible] who speculated in a rise on rents have again to look out for their lives. Eugenie, lovely as Marie Antoinette, a bright, fearful, tender thing, gives precisely as she did, her jewels to the poor. But, alas! the Mirabeaus and Lafayettes are no longer there to resist the rabble. These feeble types of Mirabeau, which the France of this day possesses, have given embrace to the sulky Louis, and no reconciling element now stands between him and the people. But all this is not apparent on the surface. The surface of Paris is as gay and smooth as ever. Guizot, Thiers, De Tocqueville, are buried in the past. Auguste Comte writes tracts for the Twenty-ninth Century. The hotels are full of English and Americans. Rothschild is as [illegible] as ever. Rachel is gone to Egypt to hurl her imprecations at Rizzio from the foot of the pyramids. La diablesse, toujours classique! But Julien Jakin still remains at his post, and has entered into partnership with Beauvallet, the fearful and brilliant historian of the Radical troops. The lady at the Buffet of the Café Veron wears still the same fascinating smile, and the French gentlemen of the old regime still sip his bouillon at the Café de la Bourse with the same classic grace. Madame Foulds's soirees are brilliantly attended. Foulds has a foible for heroes and military men. Broken down English Derby-men and officers of the army and navy, with a fair sprinkling of Foulds's relatives, and a charming bevy of agents de change and speculators en haute famine make up the bulk of the circle. Dark-eyed Jews, with the hair dressed a la Eugenie, whisper fresh with oriental voluptuousness the latest destructions in the rentes, and the Algerine officer of engineers who stands by, ogles them with African intensity, twists his sunburnt moustache and exclaims "en avant les coquines!" A sinister but aristocratic-looking individual glides about the salon, exchanges a furtive glance with Foulds, and bows to Madame in an abrupt manner. This is Emile Girardin, Emile of the Press. Since Madame died he assumes melancholy. But what is this stir and general whisper and titter? Little Offenbach is taken with a violent pain in his bowels. Foulds seems uneasy. The English Derby-men raise their glasses. General sensation. All seems lost in disorder. The creator of all this confusion, a dark, [illegible] looking yellow-faced man, evidently of Portuguese and a Jew, the former born and the present rival of the Rothschilds. It is Pereira! Pereira of the Credit Mobilier. The swindler of former years was, at least in look, a gentleman. But this Pereira carries around him the foul perfume of the Ghetto. Notice his crapulous smile as he hands a bouquet to Madame Foulds. Now he expostulates with Girardin. "Well satisfied," exclaims a little shrill voice; a little Hunchback's voice, Wolfgang Emden, by name, a modern Æsop, the wit of the party, a jester forcur, a kind of buffoon to Foulds, who pulls playfully the little fellow's ears, whenever he has had a crack digestion and money matters look bright. And now watch Pereira! That gentlemanly-looking man he is speaking to is Baron d'Ancour, the governor of the bank.

This is a true picture of Paris society in 1856. The Paris Wall-street has it all its own way, gives its tone to the ladies, dances the Cancan and crowds the Theatres. Vive la Bourse! Vive Pereira! Girardin has already a new crisp little paragraph ready for the next number of his paper. The Feuilletons give translations of Edgar Poe's moral essays. Foulds assures Louis Napoleon that things go on swimmingly and the Boulevards look as gay and joyous as ever. Passage Panorama is full of bright-looking cigar-smoking financiers, promising young Aarons and Isaacs. The Café de Foix, Trois Frères and Café Philippe and Café de Paris pour forth crowds of fine looking gentlemen with cotelette de mouton smiles and claret dimples gracefully playing about their lips and lending unwonted elasticity to their gait. Now for a demi-tasse! Garçon, un fondue! The cafés soon present a picturesque appearance. Here a little pensionaire, dancing with his little French eyes glibly over the Moniteur du soir. There a gay young military Lothario, sipping his coffee with Arab indifference, and playing eyes with the grisettes and [illegible] who happen to pass by. Yonder, [illegible] Turc, and while the garçon, who takes the jerk for a call, comes purring and [illegible], officer shakes hands in the middle of the Boulevard with a grisette of [illegible], who has just made her descent from the top of an omnibus in the unspeakable delight of the regimental old hottentot of the Vincennes, who [illegible] the trick and were longnecking the [illegible] manoeuvres of her robe, in her [illegible] downward, with "perfect ecstasy." Oh, la jeunesse! Around are a number of Robert Macaire looking individuals, dressed [illegible] Gilpin, one hand reposing in the [illegible] pocket, and the hat, with a slight side-[illegible] character, the mouth moving as if mumbling [illegible], and the eyes sending forth [illegible] of [illegible] reality. These are flâneurs, [illegible] Gives all our petits soins, and [illegible] with the lady at the Buffet. These half [illegible] Chateaugrands, sans players, many respectable readers of the Debats, drinking their café, taking their vogue home with them in their pocket. Price for the Chateaubriand, the boy, [illegible] to the [illegible] with [illegible] for sale. Little girls selling their flowers. Transatlantic looking beings spitting and reading the list of distinguished Americans in Paris in the last New-York paper. All leisure, joy and pleasure! The cafés as brilliant, the Boulevards as gay as ever. Happy France.

Just round the Café Veron, taking the third turning left from the rue Richelieu, a little rue, rue d'Aumbiès, leads on its right to a still smaller street, rue du Petit Temple, which in its turn leads to a narrow lane or rather cul de sac, where a café, called the Café à la Croix d'Or, also presents a fair gathering of the usual French café-house stamp. But the singular feature of this is that many who enter do not remain in the rez de chaussée, nor do they take to the staircase to the right, that leads to the billiard room, but to a staircase to the left, where they are never seen to return to the café, but disappear, nobody knows how. At the top of the staircase a little old man asks for a ticket. This ticket, after having been found to be correct by the old man, gives admission to a small corridor, at the end of which the ticket-holder is led by a boy into a room where about seventy men are assembled.

On the walls are portraits of Robespierre, Marat, and Danton, while the figure of Jesus Christ stands upon a desk in the shape of a crucifix. Behind this desk stands a man of about 28, thin, pale and with sunken eyes, and rather bilious look. He holds a paper in his hand, and reads the names of six or seven hundred persons, simply stating their occupation and place of residence. Bankers, brokers, rentiers, flour dealers, importers, embracing men of almost all professions, but chiefly commercial men. As he reads each man writes it down. Not a word is spoken besides. Only when he has done he says "C'est le tour de numero dix-sept." Monsieur Numero Dix-Sept steps to the desk, and goes through a similar operation as his predecessor, and reads a list of some five hundred persons, while every one present as before takes the names down. But not a word is spoken. Besides the reading out of the names and the calling out of the tours of the different numbers not a word is spoken. All disappear as silently as they came. This is one of the Marianne sociétés.

But the Boulevards around are as gay as ever. Lorettes and grisettes are walking about as piquant as ever. The ladies of the fashionable brothels pursue their calling as usual in the Palace Royal, and distribute themselves over all the marketable streets of the metropolis. It is somewhat late in the evening now. But this is the gayest time in Paris. This is the hour when Madame Foulds's drawing-rooms are filling. There is also a small party at Court, but Louis Napoleon stays but a short time. He is always thinking and smoking. Heaven, what smoke! What thought!

In the meanwhile the bulk of the Parisians, the honest bourgeoisie, the virtuous middle classes, have all gone to sleep or to concoct a future stock of honest bourgeoisie! Bawes epiciers! Go and multiply yourselves! Va, Gaillard! There is also a small class of people who live to themselves, sporting with fancy, lovers of art and literature; intellectual, artistic people; they alone sleep in normal health; they cultivate their own mind and heart, and taste, and take no part in the affairs of Paris. They have little cliques, but never go to parties. French transcendentalists! Elegant intellectualists! Peace be with them. Bonne nuit. But higher above them hangs the moneyed crowd—there is dissipation, recklessness, orgies during the night, and fraud during day, and from low, low down, comes up coldly and shrilly the cry for bread, bread—and God, what a cursing and gnashing of teeth!

But though the night is in its centre, still are the Boulevards as gay as ever. Women still haunt the streets. The cafés are still full. From Madame Foulds's soiree comes still the sound of music. Pereira stands flirting with one of the dark daughters of Zion! Jolly is Pereira. At the hotel of the Minister of Police mouchards run in and out. In the Café de la Croix d'Or there is still a flickering of light; the little withered old man still stands at the top of the staircase; silent men still pass in, and the reading of names is still going on, and Louis Napoleon is still thinking and smoking. Heavens, what thought and what smoke!

Morning comes again, and Paris looks as bright and gay as ever. The provinces strive to emulate the fascinating cheerfulness of the Parisians. Lyons, Bordeaux, Marseilles, Strasbourg, Metz, Lille, Orleans, Rouen, Havre, have their brilliant cafés and charming dames of the pavé. Their Rue Lafittes and Foulds, and Pereiras on a small scale, fraud of course at the top, and starvation at the bottom of the social ladder, and disgust and inanity and drudging honesty in the middle classes, and "mariannes" and priests to say amen! But what heeds it? On the surface, all looks smooth and sunny. Bread and house-rents, however, grow dearer and dearer; the dark, starving masses of Paris and Lyons begin to howl. The police have not arms enough to clutch the malcontents. But who knows about those subterranean doings? The press is gagged, and small reports and the bulletins of the Bourse are revised by Louis himself, and Pereira is a clever fellow. Vive Pereira! Vive la Bourse! It will all be plastered up until Mardi gras, and then begins the Carnival, and the Archbishop will read the Te Deum in Notre-Dame, and thousands of priests will shout the "Laudamus" for Louis, the protector of the Pope is Emperor of France. Let the "Mariannes" meet, and the howl of hunger rise, and fraud flourish everywhere. Vive Louis! Louis reigns!

And Eugenie, too, stands by while Mother Church sends up her praises. The lovely Eugenie; how sad she looks. Her womanly heart has long since fathomed all, and the sorrow of Eugenie passeth all understanding.

List of Americans

From Oct. 18 to Oct. 25.

Charles A. Lee, Charleston; [illegible] Lane, Boston; J. Lawrence, E. F. [illegible] and family, [illegible]; J. H. Delaplaine, J. French, [illegible]; J. H. Brendon, Dr. Mason, [illegible]; Mr. J. Stoughton and family, [illegible]; Mrs. Lewis, E. S. Alden and family, [illegible]; Rhode Island, W. E. Johnston, of Ohio, L. Palmer and lady, of California, Surgeon U. Anson, U.S. Navy, of Massachusetts.

[illegible] which may be regarded as a sketch of the life of Dr. Pusey, the Professor of Oriental Literature, to be brought out under the direction of his children; the life and adventures of Jessie Montgomery, the English poet, three volumes, judiciously condensed from the seven lumbering volumes by Holland, issued in London; a new life of Wordsworth, the poet, by Edward Paxton Hood; Memorials of the late Selina, Countess of Huntingdon, founder of a well-known religious sect in England; Archdeacon Hare's Life of Luther, to be issued by G. Bruimmer, of New-York, who has brought out Mr. Headley's illustrated Life of Washington, a handsomely got-up and well-written book; and, (by Remsen) Life of Washington, by Professor De Witt, (son-in-law of Guizot, and a member of the famous Dutch family of De Witt,) translated from the French. The fourth volume of Washington Irving's Life of Washington (to be completed in five volumes) is said to be far advanced. The sale, hitherto, has been very great. Lieutenant Maury's Navigation and Mottock, (republished here by Fowler,) has got into a fourth edition.

Dinsay & Jackson have just brought out a book which will be extensively read. It is The Hills, As and Saddleback, by Wm. Henry Milburn, the blind clergyman, who was Chaplain to Congress a few years ago. Dr. McCulloch has supplied a (too brief) biographical introduction. Mr. Milburn, now only thirty-three years old, is one of the most remarkable, and, we may add, interesting men of the time—fruitful as it has been in extraordinary characters. The sight of one eye was wholly lost in childhood; with the other he was sometimes read a little, slowly and painfully. At an early age he became a Minister—able, earnest, eloquent, and pious—of the Methodist Church, commencing his course of duty in the West. Since then, he is well known, not only as a preacher of the Gospel, but as a popular lecturer. A more amiable man breathes not, and few possess sounder knowledge. The volume just published contains some of his lectures—the characteristic of which is graphic language, speaking common sense.

The Christian Review (Baptist) announces an extra volume, if sufficient encouragement be given, containing a full Index to the whole series, up to the October number, which is extremely well written, and completes the twenty-first volume. This work "will include an index of Subjects and Topics, and an index of Authors, with the titles of their works, as reviewed or noticed throughout the several volumes of the Review." The cost of this volume, of 600 pages, is estimated at from $2 to $3, or about half the price of the recently-published and similarly-sized Index to the first fifty volumes of Blackwood's Magazine. As we consider an index indispensible to every work of reference—indeed to every book, dealing with facts and persons, likely to be looked into for information—we cheerfully give publicity to this announcement.

This mention of Coleridge reminds us that the Appletons have nearly ready The Ancient Mariner, with illustrations,—chiefly by Birkett Foster, we believe. Another book which they will publish in a few days, is Mrs. Estelle Lewis' Records of the Heart and other Poems, which will be got up in a very handsome manner, with engravings, by the best hands, from original drawings and paintings by Huntington, Elliott, T. A. Richards, D. Maclise, (the great Irish painter,) B. R. Brown, Chenery, Chapelle and other distinguished artists. Among the female poets of America, Mrs. Lewis stands without a superior, and this collective edition of her works will be worthy of her genius, and greatly acceptable to the great army of her admirers.

Colonel H. Yoakum's History of Texas, an important contribution to our local histories, has just been issued by the same publisher, in two 8vo volumes, with maps, plans, views and portraits. It gives a very full and most interesting history of Texas, from its first settlement in 1685 to its United States annexation in 1846. Another of Appleton's novelties is The Autobiography of a Female Slave—a Kentuckian, of very fair and beautiful complexion, who passes through a variety of strange and exciting events, and finally settles down, in independent circumstances, as a teacher of African children in a New-England village. This is a very readable Abolition novel.

Now that the political fever is subsiding, Literature is again raising its head, with every symptom of a strong determination to have its voice heard, also. In Europe, while the late war was in progress, new publications (unless bearing upon the engrossing subject of the day) had no market, and the production of them generally ceased, for a time. Gradually, however, things are settling back into their old places, and announcements of new works again greet us, in tolerable abundance, in the London and Paris journals. In this country, the recuperative process has been more rapid. The great political contest was scarcely ended ere authors and publishers were "up and stirring." Many satisfactory promises of new books have already been made, and more are expected.

Several numbers of Putnam's Illustrated Edition of the Life of George Washington have been issued. They are in royal 8vo., and consist of portraits, views of battle-fields, and historical scenes, from original drawings by eminent artists. There is also a sprinkling of maps, plans and wood-cuts. These engravings, it is scarcely necessary to add, are got up for Irving's Washington, but can be applied to the illustration of any life of "The Father of his Country." The handsome steel engravings in Dr. Spencer's History of the United States, (now publishing by Martin & Johnson,) may be applied in like manner. Dr. Griswold, we may state, is also publishing a Personal Memoir of Washington, richly illustrated with numerous portraits and other engravings, chiefly from superior original drawings.

The same publishers announce a new and superbly-illustrated work on Brazil and the Brazilians, in one octavo volume, by Rev. Dr. Kidder, former resident in Brazil, and Rev. J. C. Fletcher, late American Chaplain at Rio de Janeiro, and for a time Acting Secretary of the American Legation in that city. Long residence in, and close familiarity with, Brazil, its people and productions, eminently qualify these gentlemen for the authorship in question. The natural history of the country, as well as its general history, aspect and specialities, will be profusely illustrated by engravings (of the same character as those in the Arctic Explorations) from original sketches taken on the spot.

The Appletons have published a handsome 8vo volume, containing thirty-four sermons by the late Bishop Wainwright. It is edited by his widow, and contains a Memoir of the late Bishop, by Bishop Doane, of New-Jersey, and the address delivered at the funeral, by Rev. Dr. Higbee. The work is called The Memorial Volume. Of all the sermons which it contains only two had received Bishop Wainwright's final revision; the rest are printed from his manuscripts, as produced, from week to week, in discharge of his clerical duties. All are sound in doctrine and clear in composition.

The stereotype plates of the first of Dr. Kane's Arctic Explorations have been purchased by Childs & Peterson, (of Philadelphia,) who will bring it out with a great many new illustrations, including a portrait of Sir John Franklin, so as to make it uniform with the account of the Second Kane Expedition, just issued by them.

Mr. George Wood, author of Peter Schemihl in America, (a good idea poorly worked out,) has published, through the Appletons, a very original American novel of real life, called Merrying Too Late. This story is full of incident, and many of its characters are well drawn and well developed.

Carter & Brothers (of New-York) are about republishing the best works of the most eminent Divines of the 17th century. This series was issued in London some years ago, and has long been out of print. The first volume will contain Baxter's Priests Thoughts.

The second volume of Olshausen's Commentaries on the New Testament, embodying all of Kennard's valuable additions, and carefully revised and edited by Professor Kendrick, of the University of Rochester, is to be published in a few days by Sheldon & Blakeman, of New-York.

Palæontology; or, Lectures on Fossil Plants and Animals, is the name of a new work by Hugh Miller, author of the Old Red Sandstone, which Gould & Lincoln, of Boston, have in press.

At the last Publisher's Bookside in New-York, half a million of books, valued at half a million of dollars, were put up to auction.

Ticknor & Fields, (of New-York) are about publishing the poems of Grote and Lucia Gale.

We also say that Warren's new life-novel, Fast Days, will shortly be published by Harpers.

Thrilling Particulars—Thirty-six Lives Lost—Sixteen Saved.

Condition of the Lyonnais Sufferers.

The Bark that Ran into the Steamer Discovered Safe.

From the Detroit Free Press, Nov. 15.

By the arrival of the propeller Gen. Taylor at this port yesterday morning, from Lake Superior, we have the intelligence of the total wreck of the steamer Superior, of the Chicago and Lake Superior line, off the Pictured Rocks, on Lake Superior, and the loss of thirty-six lives! Below are the statements of the terrible calamity, made by the mate and by a passenger of the Superior, together with some incidents related by the Marquette Journal:

STATEMENT OF THE MATE.

The steamer Superior left the Sault Ste. Mary's Canal at 7 o'clock on the morning of the 29th of October; wind from the southward; weather favorable. Passed White Fish Point at 11 A. M. At 3 o'clock P. M. wind canted around S. W., and blew fresh. At 5 P. M., off Grand Marais, snow squalls, and wind blowing heavy from the S. W. I then told Captain Jones we would have to run back. He made the reply, "We will wait and see how it is at 6 o'clock." Wind still blowing heavy from the S. W. At 10 o'clock wind hauled around N. W., blowing very heavy. At 11 o'clock, made Grand Island Light, bearing about W. S. W., distant about fifteen miles. It was the intention of the Captain to run under the lee of Grand Island.

At 11½ o'clock we carried away our rudder; sea heavy and making fast. Ship then fell off into the trough of the sea. We then slipped our tiller, and tried our after-wheel, but found it would not work. At 12 o'clock her smoke-pipes blew away. The deck load, consisting of staves, merchandise, thirty-four head cattle and hogs, shifted to leeward. We then commenced throwing overboard the deck load. With considerable difficulty, got part of the cattle and hogs overboard through the gangway and by cutting away the bulwarks. Wind and sea increasing. At 1½ began to make water fast. Rigged the pumps, but could not free her. Water gaining fast. Engine kept at work until, at 3 o'clock, the water put out the fires. Sea boarding her; cleared away the anchors; hove the lead, but found no soundings; snowing; kept the lead agoing until we got seven fathoms of water. Made the land under our lee, close aboard. We then let go the small anchor; could not get the large anchor off her bows. The small anchor would not hold her, when she immediately struck forward; her stern swung round, and the next sea carried her broadside on the rocks. After she struck, I left the promenade deck and went on to the upper deck. Stood there a few minutes, aft of the pilot house; then went down again on the promenade deck, where I saw Capt. Jones for the last time. Then went through the cabin. Saw no passengers in the cabin. Went up on the hurricane deck again, aft of the wheels; there found a number of the passengers and crew. I then went down on the main deck and stood in the gangway on the lee side; saw the large boat in the water, with a number of persons in it. Cabin at this time cracking and pieces flying in every direction. I then jumped overboard and made for the boat, and got into it. The first engineer had hold of the gunwale of the boat; hauled him in, and also the watchman. Told the people in the boat to get out their oars and pull into the lake, which they did. A sea struck her and slewed her bows in shore. The next sea upset her.

I found that my feet touched the rocks. After a good deal of exertion among the floating timbers, portions of the cabin, freight, &c., I succeeded in getting a foothold on the rocks.

The place that myself and others gained was formed by rocks that had fallen from overhead, forming a sort of barrier, behind which I succeeded in getting. Found some five or six already ashore. Within about fifteen minutes the remainder of the survivors came ashore, making eighteen in all. It was very dark. The place where we reached was not more than twenty feet in length by five feet in width, at the foot of perpendicular rocks of the height of from 150 to 200 feet, the seas sweeping at the base of the rocks, on either side of us; and the water dashing up to the height of twenty feet.

With a good deal of exertion we managed to keep from freezing. At daylight we found that the boat was completely broken up, with the exception of the wheels, which were held together by the shafts and connections. They were distant from the rocks about 100 feet. About one-third of the wheels were out of the water, on which was now eight persons, viz.: Henry White, steward; Jefferson Williams, saloon-keeper; Henry Barnes, second mate; Wm. Robinson, second clerk; John Billingham, passenger, of Oatonagon; Thomas Davis, deck hand; and two men supposed to be firemen, names not known. The seas breaking over them, one after another they dropped off, and by 9 o'clock they were all washed away. We found the body of Capt. Jones, and also the bodies of Mrs. Bennett and one daughter, after daylight; theirs being the only bodies washed ashore. All attempts to make a fire failed; one look satisfied us that an attempt to escape was fruitless. We found the large boat ashore, stove in. We remained there from the morning of the 30th till the evening of the 31st, when we succeeded in repairing the boat, subsisting in the meantime on raw cabbage and raisins, with now and then a biscuit.

We took a portion of the saved in the boat, and landed them on the sand beach, about a mile and a half to the westward; then returned and got the remainder, and started for Grand Island.

The party landed on the beach started through the woods for Mr. Fowell's house, on the main land opposite the Island; distant about twelve miles.

JOSEPH DAVIS.

STATEMENT OF A PASSENGER.

We left the Sault on the morning of the 29th of October, at 7 o'clock, weather looking favorable. 1 o'clock P. M., wind blowing fresh from S. W. About 10 o'clock wind hauled to N. W., and blew hard, making sea very fast. I was sitting in the cabin. She made a list over to leeward. Passengers all rushed out to windward, clinging to the rail. They all thought she was sinking. Capt. Jones came along and said: "Make yourselves easy, we will throw over the deck load." The wheelsman said the rudder was broken. Mr. Minzer and myself got the ladies back into the cabin, and seated them on the floor, it being impossible for them to stand. I then went below, where they were throwing over the freight; remained there a few minutes, and returned to the cabin. As I went up, noticed the smoke-pipes were gone. After the engine was stopped we attempted to get life-preservers for the ladies, and found them of no use. By this time she was drifting towards the rocks, as I could discern the outlines of the land. All was confusion, all trying to save themselves with doors, &c., waiting for her to strike. It was blowing very heavy, a sleety, chilly rain and snow. I noticed that Mr. Minzer and sisters had got on the hurricane deck, and got hold of the life-boat. I helped my sister and a boy, Wm. Simsons, on the hurricane deck. When we were on the way up, she struck, and her stern swung around. The sea struck her so hard that it threatened to throw over the boat. I should think we were there about five minutes, when a heavy sea struck her, and she gave a lurch, and her deck parted in the middle and fell in. A number of men rolled down. The deck parting drew my attention, and the first I saw of the boat she was in the water. Supposing my sister was there, I jumped off the deck into the water, and found her. Mr. Minzer, and four sisters, and some other persons, had hold of the boat. But a moment after I got hold of the boat, a heavy sea capsized her, a piece of timber struck me on the head, knocking me senseless. When I came to, I found myself strangling. I reached out to grasp something, and caught a rope. I crawled out of the water, and found it was the painter of the boat. When I got back, I found only one person hold of the boat. The next sea threw me up in the drifting timber. I was closely jammed among the timber and wreck, it was with great difficulty I extricated myself. I heard some one speak, and crawled upon the rocks; then I found Mr. Davis, mate, and the boy Simsons, who I had not seen since I jumped off the wreck; it was but a few moments. They were all ashore that were saved. During the night we heard some one hallooing, and thought it was some one ashore on another part of the beach; but, when daylight came, we discovered it to be persons on the wheels of the boat. They called for assistance. We could not give them any, and in a few hours all were washed off. The boy Simsons was deranged, and had considerable trouble from the time we went ashore until he died. I forget to mention that, as I was going up on the hurricane deck, I heard Captain Jones say, "Stick to the wreck." The officers of the boat did all they could to save the boat and passengers. After daylight we tried everything, and in various ways, to make a fire, but all attempts failed. We then looked about for something to eat, but found nothing but a few wet crackers, cold cabbage and dried apples. But before this time we were looking among the rubbish and drift timber to find others, and found the bodies of Captain Jones, Mrs. Bennett and daughter. We kept exercising ourselves during the day to keep from freezing, and at night made a shelter with mattresses and pieces of the wreck, and by that means passed the night. Sea still kept running high and wind blowing. Towards noon the second day, the wind lulling and sea running down some, about 4 o'clock we launched the boat with considerable difficulty, owing to our exhausted state. Eight persons got into the boat, and landed one mile and a half distant on the beach. Davis and two others returning, we all got in, making 11, and pulled for Grand Island, wind blowing fresh out of the northwest, supposed to be six miles off. By this time it was dark, we supposed we had got far enough. We landed, after some consideration, on a running shore. INCIDENTS OF THE WRECK.

From the Marquette Journal, Nov. 8.

The snow was falling fast during the night, rendering it intensely cold and slippery upon the deck, and so dark that it was impossible to discern anything. Capt. Jones in ascending upon the pilot house slipped and fell, bruising himself severely, yet he relaxed not his efforts in the least. At another time while standing near the gangway a heavy sea swept him overboard, but fortunately it returned and brought him back, but at length, alas, he met a watery grave. His body was found by the survivors at daylight, having been washed ashore before the other bodies were. From this fact it was thought that he must have nearly reached it alive. Mr. Ernst, the porter, informs us that Capt. Jones came into the cabin where he was sitting and said: "Boys, I want you to stick to the boat as long as there is anything left of her; this is the fourth boat I have lost, but I shall not probably lose another. If any of you get ashore I want you to go and tell my mother that I did all I could to save the boat." That he did do all he could, there is no doubt.

The first engineer, Mr. Stephen Coolahan, to whom we are indebted for most of the particulars given, informs us that it was with difficulty that he was saved. He went from the deck through the cabin, and met the chambermaid, who asked him if he could not save her. He said he would see. They then went aft the wheel-house to the yawl-boat, in which were seated two ladies. They managed to get it afloat, but it soon capsized in the surf, and all were lost except himself, and he hardly knew how he came on shore. Chas. Ernst, the porter, attempted to swim ashore, but was much bruised by the floating timbers, and at last the life-boat struck him on the head, injuring him severely; but he managed to grasp the boat, and was washed ashore, with several others.

The next morning nothing was visible but the wheels, which, being strongly made and anchored fast by the engine and heavy machinery, had not been swept away. Upon these were seen clinging the bodies of seven men, among them the two clerks and the first saloon keeper. As they were but three or four rods from shore their cries could be heard distinctly calling to those on shore to come with the boats and save them. But this was impossible, as the surf beating on the rocks would have swamped a good boat almost instantly, and those that were washed ashore were almost like the steamer, a wreck. One by one they dropped off into the water until all were gone. The scene is described as painful beyond description, as the survivors were within speaking distance, yet without the power to render assistance.

The saved suffered extremely from cold and hunger, and all of them were more or less bruised. Three days they were weather-bound, and not only this but rock-bound too, as the bluff at this point rises nearly three hundred feet and almost perpendicular, presenting an impassable barrier. At this time the sea subsided sufficiently for them to reach Grand Island. They patched up the boats and started, going part of the way on land and part on water. Two boys died on the way from exposure. The saved were obliged to subsist during this time upon such articles as chance threw on shore—raw vegetables, raisins, and flour being the principal articles.

It is certain that the number of the lost is 42, and it is more likely that there are others that our informant is not aware of, that would swell the number to 50.

The Superior was owned by A. T. Stewart & Co., of Chicago. She had on board 500 barrels of pork and beef for the mines, besides flour, cattle and hogs. The boat was insured; we are not informed as to whether the cargo was.

CONDITION OF THE LYONNAIS SUFFERERS.

The Bark Adriatic that ran the Steamer down.

The ten sailors who were saved in the boat with Mr. Laguerre have been placed in the boarding-house of Mr. Chatillon, No. 79 Leonard-street. Some of the poor fellows had their fingers and toes frost-bitten, but not so severely as to deprive them of their use. Large blotches have also appeared on the arms and legs of some, indicating the spots where the frost acted most powerfully. They are all able to walk about, however, and their ultimate restoration to vigorous health is not an event to be doubted. Yesterday the French Consul and the agent of the steamship line to which the ill-fated vessel belonged, provided the crew with money to purchase clothing, of which they stood in great need.

The surgeon in charge of the Vigo, another vessel belonging to the same company, has, we believe, received instructions to visit and attend such of the passengers or crew of the Lyonnais as are still confined to bed or laboring under severe illness. The passengers, as soon as they are sufficiently restored, will be furnished passages by the company either in the Vigo or in the vessel immediately succeeding her. Miss Salmonds is at the house of her parents, who reside, it is said, in the Bowery, and is reported to be doing well. The other lady passenger is with her friends, and recovers rapidly. In fact, considering all the horrors and sufferings to which the unfortunate party were exposed, their present condition may be regarded, so far as physical health is concerned, as exceedingly satisfactory.

We have been requested to state that the child of Mr. Francois Barroche fortunately was not, as first reported, with its parents, on board the Lyonnais.

The announcement, in our evening edition yesterday, that the vessel that run down the Lyonnais was the bark Adriatic, that she had arrived at her destined port safely, and that she had received but trifling damage, was a great relief to the merchants, who were in such suspense as to what ship it might be. It was relief too, to those who had no business interest at stake, but who were troubled lest she too, had gone to the bottom, carrying still more premature death with her of those on board. But, after the first relief, on hearing the ship's name, and that she was safe, people began to ask—"If the Adriatic was not disabled, why did she not remain and assist those upon the [illegible]

Mexican Politics—The Runaway War Steamer at Havana—Return of the Mexican War Steamer Pizarro from the Boca Chica Expedition.

Havana, (Nov. 19) Correspondence of the Charleston Standard.

By the British West India mail steamer, from Vera Cruz, we have late news from Mexico, which shows that Comonfort is yet enabled to hold in the revolutionary spirit, which is kept in a state of excitement by the influence of the clergy, and there was would cloak their way to power under the [illegible] of the priesthood. Dr. Gadsden, brother of the late Minister of the United States to that Republic, arrived by the British mail steamer and leaves this morning by the Isabel for Charleston. His accounts describe the position of the present Minister, Lerdo, and the prospect for a permanency under the power of that man. Commerce seems equal to the amount of [illegible] has assumed, and the church stables will be thoroughly cleansed, although it may consume more time than was at first anticipated. Almonte, appointed Minister to the Court of St. James, is also a passenger by the British steamer which is to leave this evening for St. Thomas and Southampton.

The Mexican war steamer Iturbide, which has run away from Mexico, appeared in our offing three or four days ago, and entered port in defiance of [illegible] she entered under the flag which she had deserted. She will probably not be permitted to go to sea, by the Captain-General, until communications can be interchanged with the Mexican Government, as to her present predicament, without fear that she can fight fully wear, or rather with flag which she has resumed in violation of allegiance, she can only be viewed as a pirate, under the parlance of civilized nations. The Mexican Consul requested the Captain-General to prevent her departure, on the day following her arrival in this port, and Gen. Almonte has continued the application, which will be respected, unless we should determine in favor of a bribe, to make a prize of her, or levy attachment for payment of our debts.

The Spanish war steamer Pizarro returned from Boca Chica on the 8th inst. [illegible] so favorable to the Spanish filibusters. [illegible] was anticipated by the Government. The supply of Sam, whom he has created President of the Dominican Republic, feeling the power to which he has been unexpectedly helped, is not so submissive to the Spanish policy as was anticipated, and declares the only [illegible] for the advantage of Spain, is to make the Dominicans [illegible] to the Spanish realms. He objects to making the soldiers and citizens "to the numerous [illegible] of Spain, by the certificates of Lavoyta; declares the advantage of arms to be placed by Spanish agents into their hands without his direction; [illegible] can protect the country and preserve [illegible] his vast colored family, and says all [illegible] their places. Yet he fears the [illegible] being made by Lavoyta, with ample force to hold him, and British and French Consuls to advise him, and may be compelled to yield. Santana is also in the field, with a respectable force, to resist the illegal President, if he becomes traitor, and the Spanish Dictator, if he undertakes enforcing of the government by armed force. These troubles are nothing, however, to the stars and stripes now seen afloat in those waters, and our mutual treaty obligations are not consummated, which Mr. Lavoyta and his armed vessels would be compelled to respect.

News from the West Indies.

Advices from Barbadoes and Demerara are received to the 24th ult. The papers are mostly filled with local politics.

Barbadoes was suffering from dry weather. The state of the growing crops was not at all satisfactory owing to the prolonged absence of rain. The revenue was in a very flourishing condition. Useful legislative measures were in progress through the House of Assembly; among them we notice bills for the incorporation of Bridgetown, for improving the Bay of the Island, by removing antiquated restrictions which prevented any lawyer from practising there save such as had passed through the Inns of Court in England, and for incorporating the Barbadoes Water Company.

The markets at Barbadoes on the 24th ult. were dull, with low prices ruling. Flour was selling at $6 a barrel; Corn Meal, $4 65; Cracked do., $4 75; a barrel; Pilot Bread, $4; Prime Mess Beef, $16 50; Prime, $12 50; Codfish per qtl., $2 75; Corn per bush. $1 60; Carolina Rice, $5 per 100 lbs.; Best India do., $3 80 to $3 15.

The Holland importations are as rapidly decreasing. This would seem to speak very highly in favor of the superiority of the British article.—Sunday Atlas.

BEARDS.—Gentlemen who use the razor will find the Kalliston, or Orient Water, prepared by JOSEPH BURNETT & Co., Boston, a most desirable cosmetic. It softens the beard, allays all tendency to inflammation, counteracts the painful effects sometimes produced by soap, and prevents roughness and dryness of the skin, thus rendering the dreaded operation of shaving comparatively a luxury. All druggists and perfumers have it for sale.

☞ White teeth, perfumed breath, and beautiful complexion, can be acquired by using the Balm of a Thousand Flowers. Beware of counterfeits. MONDAY, Nov. 17—P. M.

The Official Averages of the Banks in the City of New-York for the week ending Saturday last, Nov. 15, the details of which are advertised on another page of this paper, present in the aggregate the following changes from the previous weekly statement of Nov. 8—an increased movement in each of the leading departments:

Increase in Loans and Discounts	$1,095,811
Increase in Specie	787,917
Increase in Undrawn Deposits	2,003,054
Decrease in Circulation	89,744

The movement is a consistent one, based upon the very considerable addition to the actual deposits, local and country, left with the Banks. The average increase of Specie proves to be about one-half the California receipts, which counted only three days out of the six in the averages of the week. The Banks begin the present week on a rising average, and probably held in their vaults to-day over $18,000,000. The Specie movements to-day are, the export of $492,002 in Gold coin and bars by the Fulton, for Havre; the delivery of $127,051 in California Gold from the Nicaragua steamer, and the disbursement from the Sub-Treasury of $274,218 in excess of the receipts.

Including the Sub-Treasury and Clearing House operations of last week, the general banking movement of the City presents the following:

Capital of Banks	$46,668,000	$53,640,000	$7,957,000

This statement is in all respects a conservative one, by comparison with last season, besides demonstrating the very substantial increase of thirteen millions of dollars in the wealth of the City employed in the business of banking; the Country bank balances embraced in the item of deposits being scarcely equal to the same period last year.

The week opened on a firm Stock Market, followed by a liberal business in nearly all the Railroads, the aggregate transactions registered at the Board being 27,500 shares. Prices were well supported through the day, and the closing sales mark an advance of ¾ ₱ cent. in Reading, and ¼ ₱ cent. in New-York and Erie, while New-York Central left off about the same as on Saturday. The heaviest operations were in these three Stocks, with a well-distributed demand for the Western shares. There was rather a dull feeling on the general list at the termination of business this afternoon. Money continued in easy supply, as at the close of last week, and this feeling induced a much larger business in Sterling Exchange for the Boston steamer at the reduced terms than was anticipated. The market this forenoon showed considerable firmness, and large sums on London were placed at 109 ₱ cent., and a fraction under for first-class bills. The whole range of quotations at the close, prime names we call 109@109¾, the extreme figure being asked by some of the standard drawers. France are 5.20@5.18¾.

In reviewing the business and condition of the Wisconsin Lake Shore Road this morning, we should have stated that the Company operate only forty miles instead of 45 miles of the line from Chicago to Milwaukee. The other Company operate, as stated, 45 miles, but the entire distance is but 85 miles.

The Pacific Fire Insurance Company have declared a half-yearly dividend of 10 ₱ cent.

The statement of the Philadelphia and Reading Road for the month of October, and for the eleven months of the fiscal year of the Company appears in this morning's Philadelphia Ledger. In remarking, as we did in our last review, that the concern had already earned its eight ₱ cent. cash dividends for the year, very large allowance it will be seen was made for contingencies.

The net profits to 1st November are		$1,822,025
Int. on Fun'd Debt of $7,000,000	$420,000
Eight ₱ cent. on Stock 11,500,000	920,000	1,340,000
Left for all contingencies		$482,025

And the business of the month of November to be added.
